Reload to refresh your session. Reload to refresh your session. Document Preparation for Scanning How to Clean a LaserJet 6L If you're using a HewlettPackard Scanjet flatbed scanner with a Transparent Materials Adapter, you can scan 35mm slides and negatives using the TMA attachment. Because light travels through slides and negatives, regular flatbeds can't digitize these transparent media properly, with the resulting scans showing dark blobs where your images should appear. Whether you need to scan negatives to acquire photos for a company brochure or to archive images from client projects, you can use the TMA to work with negative strips or single images. 1 Use a lint-free cleaning cloth to clean the scanner glass before you set up your images. Spray glass cleaner on the cloth, not on the glass itself, and do your cleanup with the scanner turned off so the glass remains cool and doesn't streak. 2 Remove the TMA cover from the underside of the scanner lid and insert the negative holder into the slide holder. Place your negative strip in the negative holder with the emulsion side facing away from the scanner glass and the shiny side of the film toward the glass. If you're scanning fewer images than your scanner can accommodate, use the supplied light shields to block light from leaking into the scanning area and reducing the quality of your output. 3 Set the holder on the scanner glass with the aligning arrow pointing toward the matching arrow on the scanner. Close the lid carefully to avoid jostling your images. 4 Follow the instructions for the specific HP software that came with your scanner. Depending on the scanner model, you may be able to scan more than one negative at a time and adjust image quality after you preview the images you'll acquire.

Warnings The oils on your fingertips can leave permanent fingerprint marks on negatives, slides and prints. Tips Hold negatives by their edges and avoid kinking or flexing them. If the light in your TMA fails to come on when you begin scanning, or shines more dimly than you expect, give the TMA 30 seconds to warm up. Check the TMA cable that plugs into the scanner, as well as the USB cable between the scanner and your computer. If all the cabling appears solid, your scanner bulb may have burned out. Unplug the scanner from electrical power before you plug in the TMA. Cant find a manual anywhere Some more stuff which may help Got on to the Hp uk click me to the HP site website and did a search using the title of this thread and it threw up lots of links, but not sure what you after. I am realising though that it needs the scarily expensive scanjet scanner bed as well. I may have to dive in with a screwdriver and wire some power direct to the lamps so I can use it on the Lexmark scanner. Pity, but if it means I can scan in the Autorex negs as well as the double width xPan copy Ill be happy. Thanks for those links though, they have helped make up my mind! Arthur Sorry I can not help further. A film photographer is just slow. Got a nice even illumination.
